

I cannot believe that there is nothing anywhere which describes the changes that the FCC wants to make re Media Ownership. Any time access to information is hidden from the public, suspicion takes on a roll in determining what is being held from public view.

I have always been a news junky and I am probably old enough to be your grandmother. I've watched a lot of news over the years and can say that I've seen a deterioration in the quality of news since about 1996. Now that the FCC wants to deregulate it further and put all of the outlets under one corporation (yes, and I've had to go underground to find out what your plans are), the news will no longer be an effective tool for the public to rely on. It has become biased and if one watches more than one news outlet, they can see basically the same reporting -- only the words have changed.

You will also be opening the door to Richard Murdock and those like him who want to monopolize the media and dictate *what* news can and cannot be reported. They will also be dictating *how* it is reported. They will no longer be called the *Free* press, and they will no longer be of benefit to the public. I am so tired of biased reporting and quite frankly, am fed up with all of the *Expert* opinions. This is not news reporting.

I hope that the FCC will reconsider what it is about to do. We are depending on *You* to correct this unfairness and to do what is right. My grandmother used to say, if it's not broken, don't fix it. One FOX network is one too much.

The public expects and deserves open, fair and unbiased news reporting, and hopefully, you will give it back to us.
